

LENA DUNHAM'S FEATURE FILM

Lena Dunham wrote, directed, shot, and starred in her first feature film, Creative Nonfiction, while she was attending Oberlin College in Ohio. The New York City native graduated only last year, but her film has already been screened by Art Production Fund, and New York's Anthology Film Archives will show it on February 18 as part of the New Filmmakers series. The premise is classic: Girl likes boy; boy sleeps with girl's so-called friend. But Dunham's pacing is perfect, and her dialogue is a dead-on parody of hyperconscious liberal arts students ("Last summer I had an existential crisis. Then I figured it out"). And it's all embellished by a surreal subplot involving a kidnapper, a fisherman, and a punk rocker. More info at artproductionfund.org and pistolskillponies.com. —FZ

