Artist's big bagels take over the Big Apple

■ The Swedish-born artist Hanna Liden is paying tribute to her adopted home of New York this summer by installing five larger-than-life sculptures of bagels around the city. Liden and the Art Production Fund will erect the foam-coated sculptures, each between 2ft and 15ft tall, and titled Everything (2015), in Manhattan's Hudson River Park and Ruth Wittenberg Plaza. Liden's bagels, which she has described as "evocative of the eternal cycle of city life", are planned to go on show from 20 July until 24 August. R.C.
