

Taxi art show hits the road

It's the traveling MoMA.

The roof-ad displays of 500 yellow cabs will be swapped for artwork this month as part of a program by the nonprofit Art Production Fund.

Through January, the work of local artists Chuck Close, known for his celebrity portraits, and Kehinde Wiley will adorn cabs zipping around town.

Several pieces will be rotated during the month.

The space — with an ad value of more than $100,000 — was donated by Show Media.

The roving exhibit made its debut last year, and featured the work of artists like Alex Katz and Yoko Ono. Tom Namako
